as we see it

Sooner or later Congress must make up its mind whether it will permit television to be a medium of public information. When the decision comes, either TV will join the press in covering House and Senate sessions and public committee hearings or will continue in its present status as a novelty—used occasionally by lawmakers at their own convenience.

In a recent televised "editorial," Dr. Frank Stanton, president of CBS, debunked arguments that TV creates a circus atmosphere and that the cameras are obtrusive. "After all," he said, "radio and television hear and see exactly what happens. They don't compel people to show off or misbehave. They are the public's mirrors reflecting things exactly as they are." He then pointed out that two cameras take up no more room than four newspaper reporters.

Dr. Stanton was speaking specifically to urge radio and TV coverage of the hearings on Senator McCarthy. Both media had been barred from the committee room. But his thesis that TV has as much right as newspapers to cover Government news went beyond this one case.

It is questionable whether Congressional committees should open all hearings to the public and relinquish their right to executive sessions. But when hearings are public, it seems senseless to ban television, the one medium that cannot be inaccurate in its reporting of current events.

It is time that television began realizing its long-heralded capability of bringing more democracy to our Government by keeping us fully informed on events in Washington.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

Varied activities of New York's famed City Center will form the basis of MAX LIEBMAN'S third spectacular, this one scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 10. JUDY HOLLIDAY, STEVE ALLEN and DICK SHAWN will star in a musical review, which is to include a 20-minute ballet, "Filling Station," performed by the City Center Ballet Company.

Both CBS and NBC trying to sign JANIS PAIGE for color TV shows, after her impressive performance on ED SULLIVAN's first Toast of the Town colorcast last month. . . . CHARLES RUGGLES and his The World of Mr. Sweeney, a nighttime entry this summer, will be a daily daytime program beginning Monday, Oct. 4.

MARTHA RAYE's guest for her first show Tuesday, Sept. 28, will be WALLY COX and, of course, The Rock—ROCKY GRAZIANO. . . . There are now 31,036,000 TV sets around the country, according to NBC's latest count . . . CLAUDETTE COLBERT stars in a weekly half-hour telefilm series starting Saturday nights in late October or early November. Show will replace The Duke.

FRED ALLEN talking with Omnibus producers about doing a regular comedy spot on that show this season . . . MYRNA LOY, ROSALIND RUSSELL, FARLEY GRANGER and RICHARD WIDMARK among the movie stars awaiting a lead on U.S. Steel Hour as soon as the right play comes along for them . . . GARY MERRILL signed to star in "Freighter" on Steel Hour in October. It's a play about men who go down to the sea, etc.

EDDY ARNOLD starring in a new telefilm series which he'll personally bankroll. It will be the first telefilm show to be produced in Chicago . . . The new Rin Tin Tin show goes Friday nights on ABC, taking over the time originally slated for JUNE HAVOC. JUNE's show is now set for CBS Saturday nights.

GORDON MacRAE takes over as permanent singing emcee on all Comedy Hour shows except the five to star MARTIN and LEWIS and four so-called "Book Shows" . . . He'll start with the Hollywood Bowl show Sunday, Sept. 26, which headlines PATTI PAIGE.

Kukla, Fran and Ollie may get a half-hour Saturday mornings on ABC, in addition to the daytime show they've already started in New York and Chicago only.

HOLLYWOOD Dan Jenkins reports:

BING CROSBY has already changed his mind about not doing any TV this season. He'll appear with IRVING BERLIN on ED SULLIVAN's Toast of the Town in a show designed as a salute to "White Christmas," CROSBY's latest picture . . . GE Theater, which has just spent a record $71,000 on a single half-hour TV film starring JACK BENNY, is now making contractual noises at GARY COOPER and JIMMY STEWART.

For $18,000—the cost of approximately 15 minutes' worth of one I Love Lucy film, LUCILLE BALL and DESI ARNAZ have bought a brown colt by Count Speed out of Nursery School and have thus started Desilu Stables . . . A sponsor already has signed for the new ROBERT CUMMINGS filmed show, but will have to wait until January for a network time spot to open up.

NBC will do a star-studded hour-long one-shot on Monday, Sept. 20, on which stars will be saluted for their work overseas for the Armed Forces . . . Latest Rumor: a feature film co-starring EDDIE FISHER and DEBBIE REYNOLDS . . . Mickey Rooney Enterprises will do still another film pilot—Daniel Boone, starring DON BARRY.

Hollywood is a bad influence? A top exec of AFTRA here has quit to enter the Harvard Divinity School. He follows a former TV press agent and producer who is now an ordained minister . . . CBS is planning a New Year's Day color show from Las Vegas to compete—I mean compete—with NBC's Rose Parade.

M-G-M, proudest of the great major movie studios, keeps losing people to TV. BILL GRADY, casting director for 22 years, has signed as casting director for the Chrysler shows on CBS-TV. JOHN NESBITT, who did all those "Passing Parade" shorts for M-G-M, will write and narrate a half-hour series called The Story Teller for HAL ROACH, JR. PETER LAWFORD, one of the brighter stars, has quit for Dear Phoebe on TV. And KARL FREUND, chief cinematographer for years, went over to Desilu three years ago with LUCILLE BALL—herself a former M-G-M star.

BURNS AND ALLEN are doing a do-it-yourself episode for their film show . . . Medic, the great new NBC show opposite CBS' Lucy, will not be entirely contemporary. One film will deal with the attempt to save Lincoln after he was shot.

Los Angeles, with 1,900,000 TV sets, had just 7200 seats available for the Sept. 15 MARCIANO-CHARLES re-match on theater TV. For which, thanks a lot.

The Liberace Legend

IT ALL BEGAN WITH A PIANO PLAYER NAMED BUSTER KEYS

Once upon a time there was a piano player named Buster Keys, who made more or less of a living playing the piano in saloons. He was different from most piano players in that he didn't allow the customers to buy him a snort now and again and didn't sit there with a cigaret dangling from his lip like he was Hoagy Carmichael cooking up "Stardust." He just played, smiling dreamily and occasionally winking in a pure-friendship sort of way at any pretty girl who happened to be paying attention. He made maybe 30 bucks a week, plus sandwiches and coffee.

Buster today goes under his real name of Liberace. He is still smiling dreamily at the girls. He is also making maybe a million bucks a year and can even afford to buy his own coffee. Liberace, at 34, is already a living American legend.

Unfortunately, however, Liberace has chosen to make his headquarters in Hollywood, thus laying himself wide open to the charge of being a Hollywood Character.

Under any other circumstances Wladziu Valentino Liberace would merely be a nice guy, a bit on the naive side, playing the piano for a living. Under Hollywood circumstances he is a Character, a Personality, a Celebrity, and thus fair game for the poison-pen set. They make fun of him, for outwardly he is the perfect patsy for such shenanigans—a perpetually grinning matinee idol, slightly on the pudgy side, who seems for all the world to be an overgrown little boy dependent on his mother.

But the very people who have kidded about him have, on their first contact with him, found him to be the most cooperative of souls, wholly uncomplicated, not at all temperamental and with a rare sense of humor.

Newspaper columnists who have gleefully taken Liberace to sophisticated task have been amazed at the vituperative response from his fans.

"Go ahead and laugh," one of Liberace's canniest associates remarks, "but the fact is that 'Lee's' sincerity and genuine delight with what he is doing is something that comes across on that television screen."

The most important single factor in the Liberace legend is the pianist's mother. His parents were separated when Liberace was barely out of babyhood. His mother, convinced she had a child prodigy on her hands (Liberace started playing the piano when he was under five) and determined that her boy would have every opportunity possible, clerked by day and scrubbed floors by night to keep her family together. Liberace has never forgotten it. Everything he does today, he does "for Mom."

The sharpshooters have often wondered out loud why Liberace has never married, figuring him to be about as eligible as it's possible for a man to get. Mama's Boy, they call him. The fact of the matter is that Liberace has twice come very close to getting married. The other fact of the matter, according to a close associate, is that he will never marry so long as his mother is still alive. For the time being, all his devotion is reserved for her and his music.

Three years ago "Lee" was a moderately successful cafe entertainer who used to take out ads in the trade papers to explain how his name was pronounced. He got his first taste of network fame when he took over for Dinah Shore for 13 weeks in the summer of 1952. And then the snowball started to roll.

Yet, according to those who know him best, he has not changed one iota. He is modest, unassuming, accommodating. He has not yet gotten over the fact that all this has happened to him, a Polish boy out of Milwaukee. Nor has he forgotten that he worked long and hard before falling into this kind of money. When he had to lay off the musicians on his show for two weeks recently, he gave them each $175 vacation pay, a gesture not called for by any union rules. When the contractor who was to build his new home came down with polio the day the actual building got under way, Liberace quietly saw to it that the contractor and his family were taken care of financially. When a couple of gaping tourists stopped their car in front of his house one afternoon, he casually invited them in and gave them the grand tour.

Liberace is perhaps the only man who can smile and eat spaghetti at the same time. He is delighted with everything—except the vicious gossip.

"Why?" he asks. "Why do they say these things about me? What have I done to them?"

Some months ago "Lee" lunched with a movie producer he hadn't seen in years. The producer, half seriously, outlined a picture he said he'd been thinking about for Liberace.

"It's about a frustrated piano player," he said, "a fight promoter who had always wanted to play but who wound up handling a bunch of punch drunk fighters. Then he latches onto a fighter who can really play the piano and he sends him out on this concert tour. . . ."

The Liberace smile blinded four people in the next booth. "Gee," he exclaimed, "I'd love to do something like that. And look," he added eagerly, flexing his biceps in the traditional pose, "I've got muscles, too."

If you think he hasn't, pick a fight with him.

'Mom': Liberace; his mother, who ▶ is his inspiration; and band leader Lawrence Welk, out for fun.

The Girl With No Birthdays

For Six Years, Gloria McMillan Has Been Sweet 16 In 'Our Miss Brooks'

Gloria McMillan, at 20, is something of a rarity on the Hollywood scene. A veteran of no less than 16 years as a radio, movie and TV performer, she is almost painfully normal, has no particular aspiration to be a Big Star, and her conversation is singularly (and refreshingly) free of the usual show-business cliches.

For the past six years she has been a member of one of Hollywood's happiest families: the cast of both the radio and TV versions of Our Miss Brooks. She has played the 16-year-old Harriet Conklin since the show's inception and expects to go on playing it until either (1) the show folds or (2) the make-up man can no longer make her look 16. She seems to have a gilt-edged annuity on both counts.

Born in Portland, Ore., Gloria made her first public appearance at the age of 4 on a Portland radio show, "Stars of Tomorrow." She sang, and it was pretty awful. At 6, she moved to Beverly Hills with her parents and promptly became a youthful radio actress. Her mother, a professional children's agent, has kept a careful rein on her, and Gloria today is an exceptionally well-balanced, intelligent girl with no illusions whatever about the alleged glamor of being an actress. She has a lone frustration: the town's radio directors still think of her as being 12—a mental block she can't break.

She unabashedly idolizes Eve Arden, the star of Our Miss Brooks, and looks upon Gale Gordon, the Osgood Conklin of the show, as a father (her own father died when she was 11).

Aside from her career, which to her is a quite matter-of-fact portion of her life, Gloria teaches Sunday School, sings in a Beverly Hills church choir and conducts a daily Bible class at a local summer camp for primary-grade children. She also rides horseback and plays chess.

All in all, there seems to be just one fly in all this glorious ointment. She has never been able to realize a burning ambition—to become a singer with a band. There, now! Her secret is out!

Playing the game: Roxanne, Bud Collyer and friends 'Beat the Clock' at home.

YOU CAN PLAY TV GAMES AT HOME:

Ramar, Anyone?

Face up to it, parents: you're trapped. Your TV set has you at last. You'll probably never get away from it now —and neither will your children.

For television no longer seems content to confine its influence to the screen alone. Now it's creeping all over the place.

Want proof?

Well, let's inspect the once-innocent field of children's games. It used to be that the kids were happy to play parcheesi, pick-up-sticks, Old Maid and Red Rover; or satisfied simply to swat each other with rocks. But today, dominated by their favorite TV shows, they play "Super Circus," "Beat the Clock," "Ramar of the Jungle," "Down You Go" and even a brain-twister invented by and named after John Cameron Swayze.

In addition, Howdy Doody is associated with an assortment of battery-operated games. Superman turns out a complicated jigsaw puzzle. Pinky Lee is driving the young sports wild with something called "Runaway Frankfurter Race." And in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit, store racks are groaning with toys and games named after the Lone Ranger, the Whistling Wizard, Hopalong Cassidy, Wild Bill Hickok, Rocky Jones—Space Ranger, Roy Rogers, Bozo the Clown, Ding Dong School.

Quietest game of the bunch is "Swayze" (approximately $3), a complicated jumble of maps, pins (to stick in the maps), spinning dials and little pieces of paper.

"Beat the Clock" (about $4) is not so subtle. It comes in a large cardboard box which includes balloons, hoops, juggling cups, apple-ducking cups, funny hats, a cardboard clock and a book of detailed instructions for performing many of the whimsies seen on Bud Collyer's show. In fact, the game is almost an exact duplicate of the program; only Roxanne is missing.

With children, the most popular of all TV playroom games probably is "Winky Dink and You," a modest kit containing a plastic window, a box of crayons and a rag. When Jack Barry and Winky Dink go on the air once a week, the kids haul out the windows, plaster them on the TV screens and trace Barry's drawings. This keeps the household quiet for 15 minutes. Kits cost about 50 cents, and 600,000 of them have been sold so far.

The game "Ramar of the Jungle" (about $1.49) is based upon the bloodcurdler that stars Jon Hall. Its object seems to be to lose its participants in a cardboard labyrinth of miasmic jungle wastes. Marked on the cardboard are snares and pitfalls like "Captured by Pygmies (lose two moves)." Winner is the player who, surviving these horrors, is first to reach the "Temple of the Love Goddess."

The craze for toys and games based upon TV shows perhaps reached its peak during the Congressional hearings involving Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy and the Department of the Army last summer. At that time, an entrepreneur marketed in the New York five-and-10-cent stores a game called "Washington Hearings," complete with a gavel, toy mikes and witness badges. Unfortunately, the kids didn't go for it. Too tame.

Ultra-qualified to teach kitchen lore is Ruth Bean, who presides over the daily Shop, Look and Cook on WATV, Newark, N.J. In addition to her TV chores, she's studied food facts as restaurant owner-operator, college faculty member, cookbook compiler and housewife.

For warm weather nibbling during favorite programs, Ruth Bean recommends sandwiches using whatever filling the ingenious lady of the house prefers (on easier-to-slice day-old bread, cut with a sharp knife, each slice buttered); "dips," and an easily-prepared Pineapple-Grape Punch.

Her suggestions, she points out, are based on the premise that "TV watching today is a family, rather than a party, affair. Therefore, the preparation of TV snacks requires ingredients that are available, that are easy to prepare and that are appealing to all members of the family."

The following, she believes, meet each and every test.

Dips

Here are three tasty concoctions tc scoop up with potato chips, melba toast, wholewheat wafers, or your favorite cracker:

1. Use equal amounts of cream cheese and blue cheese, mash and soften with sour cream. Spice with chopped olives, green or black.

2. Mash liverwurst; add grated onion juice; moisten with salad dressing.

3. Mix ground cooked ham with finely chopped hard-boiled eggs; add a bit of chopped sweet pickle, and mayonnaise to moisten.

Pineapple-Grape Punch

Combine 2 cups pineapple juice, 1 cup grape juice and 1 banana, sliced. Chill. Pour over ice cubes. Serve with fresh mint.

why KFO went ABC

by BURR TILLSTROM

Editor's note: After a five-year association with NBC, Burr Tillstrom's popular Kuklapolitans switched to ABC. You can see them now Monday through Friday, 6-6:15 P.M., (7). The surprise move still has Chicago's televiewers antenna-deep in rumors. In the exclusive story that follows, Burr tells TV GUIDE readers the real reasons behind this "adventure" of Kukla, Fran & Ollie.

The Kuklapolitans, like any other artists, like to feel wanted. As long as two years ago we began to sense an air of hopelessness, insecurity and neglect at NBC. They became interested in "spectaculars," color TV, and shows like Home and Today. It was quite evident that the Kuklapolitans were being shelved and forgotten. That's why we left NBC.

NBC's attitude became a big mystery to me. The show was reduced to a weekly 30 minutes when it should have been exposed five times a week. It seemed NBC couldn't sell KFO commercially, yet ABC landed a bakery sponsor for a daily showing in just four short days.

Our change to Channel 7 instigated wild speculation as to the motives behind our decision to move. The press announced NBC attempted to fire Fran Allison. Others erroneously attributed it to the belief, a misconception, that KFO appeals primarily to the professional class. Neither is true.

NBC never even suggested that I release Fran Allison. They merely asked if the Kuklapolitans would become a part of the Home show with Arlene Francis. I was willing to participate on the basis of occasional guest appearances, but not as a regular feature. We wanted daily video exposure strictly on our own, so I turned it down.

One of the local columnists reported in a Chicago newspaper that advertising circles are labeling the show "too professional." The writer hinted that we were deliberately appealing to a professional audience — even inferred that KFO had become "the darling of show business" and had lost the devotion of the average viewer.

Such remarks are crazy. Our show could never become "professional." The world of fantasy is not aimed at any one age. Like Walt Disney's cartoons

5 4 ROBERT MONTGOMERY
The fall season of the show opens with the second play written by Pulitzer Prize playwright Robert E. Sherwood under his special NBC contract: "Diary," the story of a small-town girl who leaves her unhappy home to make her way in the big city. The only help she gets comes from a young man of doubtful character. It will be a big year for the drama on TV this season. Next week's Fall Preview issue lifts the curtain.

7 BOXING—Preliminaries
Fred Sayles and Tommy Loughran report from Eastern Parkway Arena, Brooklyn.

9:00 2 STUDIO ONE—Drama
RETURN Studio One, produced by Felix Jackson, returns tonight with "Twelve Angry Men," by Reginald Rose, author of last season's "Remarkable Incident at Carson Corners" and "Thunder On Sycamore Street." The 12 men are the jurors whose decision will mean life or death for a slum boy accused of killing his brutal father. The 12 jurors are played by: Norman Feld, John Beal, Franchot Tone, Walter Abel, Lee Philips, Bart Burns, Paul Hartman, Robert Cummings, Joseph Sweeney, Edward Arnold, George Voskovec, Will West.

7 BOXING—Eastern Parkway
Del Flanagan, St. Paul, Minn., vs. Chico Varona, Havana, Cuba, welterweights, 10 rounds. Fred Sayles and Tommy Loughran report from Brooklyn, N.Y.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Flanagan | 2 | 79 | 69 | 8 | 2 | 28 |
| Varona | 4 | 69 | 56 | 13 | 0 | 33 |

A bout in the classic mold—the boxer vs. the slugger. Flanagan is a flashy, left-jabbing, fancy-stepping fighter, while Varona is a solid belter with dynamite in both fists. This bout should be a treat.

Compiled by Nat Fleischer (The Ring)

9 BOXING—New York City
Frankie Fernandez, Honolulu, H.I. vs. Luther Rawlings, Chicago, Ill., welterweights, 10 rounds. Chris Schenkel reports from St. Nicholas Arena.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

| | Rating | Bouts | W | L | D | KO's |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Fernandez | 10 | 36 | 29 | 6 | 1 | 17 |
| Rawlings | Unrated | 57 | 34 | 17 | 6 | 13 |

"Fearless" Frankie must win this one to stay in the first 10 among the welterweights. He is a durable, wade-in type of fighter. Rawlings is a tall, at times awkward battler, who can give Fernandez a busy evening.

Compiled by Nat Fleischer (The Ring)

Letters to the Editor

YOU TELL TELEVISION

On Parker's Pate

Could you settle an argument for me? I say that Frank Parker wears a wig, but my girl friend disagrees with me. Would you please say which of us is right?—Janet Senato, Hillside, Ill. [A very reliable source reports that Frank does indeed sport a scalp rug.—Ed.]

Parker

Criticizing The Critic

I read your recent review of the Dorsey Brother's Stage Show and think that it was very unfair. They put on a good show. After all, it's their first attempt on TV. At least it's a relief from the shouting, prancing comedy of "Ralph Kramden" and the other tiresome Gleason characters. Jackie sure needs some new material.—Kathryn Connerty, Argo, Ill.

Friday's Girls

Recently, with a group of my friends, I saw Jack Webb in a personal appearance in connection with his new movie, "Dragnet." We thoroughly enjoyed him and the movie. My friends and I agree that Dragnet has taught us teen-agers quite a bit about life's responsibilities.—Pat Higgins, Gary, Ind.

The Game's Not The Same

There used to be a department in TV GUIDE called "Bloopers," that dealt with blunders, both visual and vocal, committed on TV. I haven't seen it for some time, and I miss it.—Bonnie Lee Strutzenberg, North Riverside, Ill. [Our "Bloopers" department has been discontinued. Why not try playing our new "Tele-Versions" game?—Ed.]

Sammy Kaye

So You Want to Lead a Band?

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

The first would-be band leader on Sammy Kaye's perennial So You Want to Lead a Band? turned out to be a 12-year-old South Carolina girl with an accent thick enough to cut up into waffles.

Kaye's entire first show, in fact, was devoted to 12-year-olds in an apparently determined effort to prove there is no substitute for experience. Actually, the show is something of an anachronism, reflecting the taste of another era and lacking the pace and polish of today's more breathless efforts. Sort of like Christian Dior's latest flapper fashions.

For professional entertainment, Kaye brings in an occasional singer of such note as Betty Clooney. This, of course, has nothing whatsoever to do with amateurs leading a band, but it's just as well. Judging from the show's popularity record, there must indeed be entertainment lurking somewhere in the spectacle of a layman waving a baton in front of a band, but it has entirely escaped this reviewer's notice. Still, who can argue with success?

◀ Hale of Homicide: Anthony Ross.

The Telltale Clue

The best thing about CBS-TV's Thursday night summer mystery show, The Telltale Clue, is its title. There is an aura of Edgar Allan Poe about it, but the writers, having purloined the better part of a Poe title, have let it go at that. The rest is pure routine.

The switch here is the introduction somewhere of a fairly obvious clue, which the viewer is invited to dig out for himself during the commercial before the denouement. The body in the lake was well preserved because a paper mill had been dumping formaldehyde into the water all these years; or the car actually chased the poor pedestrian, since the tire tracks zigzagged; or the detective himself comes down with poison ivy.

The sleuth is Capt. Richard Hale of Homicide, played with an almost burning intensity by Anthony Ross. Ross bears down on his lines to the point where it begins to create a certain amount of sympathy for the villain. Sympathy for the villain, of course, is prohibited by law.

All in all, The Telltale Clue is uninspired stuff, filling one of those half hours that might be better spent reading a good book. One, say, by Poe.—D.J.

FINE TUNING By OLLIE CRAWFORD

TV is used to covering all kinds of trouble—look at the soap operas!

If Congress is going to look into things, it shouldn't mind the public looking in. The average guy ought to be able to watch his government at work, just to make sure it is. He wants to see what's doing, and who's doing him. He wants to put his eyes and ears where his money is.

There's nothing like a few camera angles to check up on other angles.

Television would like to cover the hearings without using a keyhole-shaped camera. The average guy wants to keep his eye on his elected representative, and he doesn't mean "Howdy Doody." The slogan, "What you don't know won't hurt you," doesn't apply to Congress.

In the case of Congress, you might say that seeing is relieving.

There's an old rule about Washington—the more it's covered, the more it's uncovered.

'I Was A Western Badder'

(A STIRRING SAGA OF THE TV RANGE)

By Gavin Moloney

I am a free-lance actor. This simply means I work through an agent and at any Hollywood studio which might want my services, rather than being under contract to any one studio.

Well, a few months ago, my agent called and informed me I had an interview at General Service Studios for a part in the Lone Ranger series. The interview was set for the next day.

I was aware, of course, that The Lone Ranger was a "Western," and thus the following day I arrived at the studio in as much of a Western motif as my wardrobe would allow without being obvious: a mild-colored string tie rather than the usual cravat. My interviewers were composed of the producer, the director and the casting director. They asked me the usual stock questions: "What have you done? How much television?" and, in this case, "Can you ride?" I could ride well enough around the Central Park bridle path and assumed this was what they meant. I was to discover later that my lack of equestrian knowledge became my nemesis. Paul Landers, the director, explained that I was to play a "badder" in this film, but if I did a good job, I might play a "gooder" later.

Mr. Moloney is an actor who, like all adherents of the realism school of acting, believes in living his part—for badder or for worse.

My agent called me that evening and informed me that the studio had agreed to pay my salary, $100 a day, rather than the usual minimum of $70. It is important to note here that most actors will take a cut in their salary when doing television work, rather than demanding full-scale, as they do at a movie studio, because you are assured of a meaty part.

The next day I returned for my fitting. The picture called for a debonair quality in my character and thus my costume was attractive and well-tailored rather than the "rags" of a wrangler. I was a dude.

After my fitting I stopped by the casting office and was given my shooting date—the following Friday and possibly Saturday. If you have a small part in a TV Western, you work one day; if it is big, as mine was, you might work two days.

When I arrived home, I began work on my script. When I receive a part I always look first for the most obvious characteristics of the person I'm portraying. Then I compare those characteristics with my own personal attributes. Then I try to play the differences between myself and the person I'm pretending to be. Once I have established those differences I begin to work on interpretation, my relation to the other characters. Finally, I memorize my lines.

On Friday I arrived at the studio early, in time to observe John Hart, "The Lone Ranger" himself, in his full Western regalia, pedal into the studio on a small English bike—a sight, I thought, to shatter any youngster's illusions. Jay Silverheels—"Tonto"—conversely, arrived in a new Cadillac convertible.

Once on the set, I introduced myself to a man whom I took to be another actor and later learned was one of the wranglers. I was particularly interested in finding out, as this was my first Western, if there were any special technique required for work. Bob, the wrangler, demolished all my former ideas with the revelation that all they wanted was the lines read "Fast, loud and hard!" I realized immediately that there would be little or no opportunity for characterization, which upset me.

The stage that the Ranger company occupied was equipped to meet any situation. The stage was resplendent with a Western street complete with saloons, postoffice, bank and hotels. It also contained the interiors of the aforementioned buildings, plus a section with a large backdrop of sky and papier-mache boulders. For close-up shots the actors worked the horses right on the stage. This revelation disturbed me because I could imagine my horse becoming excited and throwing me against the camera equipment or into one of the extremely hot spotlights. However, I discovered my fears were without basis, as the horses were highly trained and gentle as rabbits—except for Silver, the Ranger's high-strung horse.

As gentle as the horses were, they must have sensed my lack of equestrian ability—for in the late afternoon I met my nemesis. I had to lead my "badder buddies" into the boulder area to ambush the Ranger. We cantered around the large rocks and toward the camera. I raised my hand, halted the men behind me, and turned my horse around to face them. I gave my orders and dismounted. We then concealed ourselves behind the boulders. That was the way the scene was supposed to work out.

But I was unable to keep my horse from backing up into the camera. The usual TV shot is made twice or possibly three times; this particular shot we made at least 10 times and still didn't get it right. The director began working up a large ulcer. I'm sure that the studio now has more shots of a horse from an unusual angle than any other studio in town. Along about the fifth take, when the director was on the verge of tears and berating me unmercifully, I was prepared to leave the film industry for good.

The director finally decided to print an earlier take and use a "wild track," which means that appropriate sound is recorded and later edited into the shot. The necessity of using a wild track, of course, did not reflect well on me, and I doubt if I shall ever work for that company again.

The next and final day, fortunately, I did not have to work with any more horses. When I arrived on the set the director was obviously cool toward me and the rest of the company exhibited the usual quiet sympathy. The day went smoothly until the last shot of the picture. I had the Lone Ranger and Tonto tied up, and as I turned to leave I was to trip and fall on my face. The purpose was to break one of my spurs and lead to my eventual identification as the "badder."

The scene was set up and we made a rehearsal. Rather than breaking my fall, as I would generally do, I fell flat on my face. I felt I owed them the realism of honestly bouncing, in payment for the first day's fiasco. Just before the real take, the prop man came over to me and whispered, "That's an expensive six-shooter you have, so please try not to scratch it when you fall!" That was all I needed: Now I had to fall honestly and at the same time watch out that I didn't damage his gun. We started working on the director's ulcer again—one shot after another. First, I didn't fall into camera range; then my hat fell off—though to this very day I don't know why it is necessary that you never lose your hat in a Western. We finally made the take, and the assistant director helped me to my feet and took me over to the studio hospital where they patched up the scratches and bruises I incurred during my falls.

I still cringe when I hear the name "Lone Ranger," but if any casting director of Western pictures is reading this article, I want him to know I have become much more proficient on a horse and am available. However—please—if I have to fall on my face, may I have elbow and knee pads?

Who Says Baseball Is a Game?

For the cheering fan in ball park or living room, baseball's a game, one that provides plenty of kicks, especially as World Series time nears.

But not everybody shares in the fun. To the men who bring the homers and the double-plays to your TV screen, baseball is just plain work.

If the camera's eying the pretty blonde behind first base, instead of the close play at third, it's the TV director who takes the rap. That control booth

Attempted pick-off at second base with wild throw: Camera 1, which is aimed at the infield, moves to follow the runner if he attempts to score on the bad throw. Camera 3, which has been on the runner at second base, uses Zoomar lens to follow the ball as it rolls into the outfield. Camera 2, which has been aiming on 8-inch lens at first base, changes lens and direction, to follow runner for play at third.

Double steal with runners on first and third: Camera 1 shifts from its basic shot (catcher, batter, pitcher) to runner breaking for the plate. When he has scored or been tagged out, Camera 1 jumps all the way across the diamond to pick up the runner heading for second. Camera 3 also follows runner from third, then pans back to pick up runner going to second. Camera 2 stays with the single runner, from first base to second base.

A TV DIRECTOR EXPLAINS THAT THERE IS MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

fellow has to switch his cameras faster than "Lippy Leo" changes pitchers.

Some directors cross their fingers and trust that they'll be covering the important action at the right time. Others, like Milt Most, of Philadelphia's WFIL-TV, evolve ultra-scientific setups to handle every situation.

The men who man the three cameras at Philadelphia games first study Most's detailed four-page guide. Here's part of his formula.

Passed ball at home plate with men on first and second: As pitcher and catcher scramble for ball, Camera 1 uses 4-inch lens on infield. Camera 3's Zoomar is turned on the runner at second. Camera 2 follows runner on first with 12-inch lens. Camera 1, shifting to a 6-inch lens, moves to follow the man coming in from second base for close play at home plate. Similar instructions cover even rarest plays.

Singing Secretary

ANN SOTHERN REHEARSES 'LADY IN THE DARK' WITH 'SUSIE' AND 'MAISIE' ON HER MIND

Susie McNamara, one of America's more unbelievable secretaries—even in the wonderful realm of TV—is going to be more so, if she has her way.

In short and in the person of Ann Sothern—just an old song-and-dance girl at heart—she proclaims loudly that she wants to become a singing secretary.

Says Miss Sothern: "I've talked to sponsors and to the advertising agency. I want to do eight shows with music. I think they would have additional entertainment value. We can turn

Ann Sothern as 'Maisie' (above), the role that brought her movie fame. She's shown playing the character at a Reno night club this summer. At left, as Susie in Private Secretary.

Susie musical without taking her out of character. There might be, for instance, a dream sequence in which the Private Secretary dreams she is a Broadway entertainer."

For any reader who's confused at this point, Ann Sothern plays the title role in TV's Private Secretary, which put Ann back on the heights she enjoyed as the movies' "Maisie."

Speaking of "Maisie," Ann would like to play the part on television. But "M-G-M owns the rights to the character, and although it has been 10 years since last I made a 'Maisie' picture, the studio is unwilling to relinquish her for television."

Ann is currently rehearsing for her starring role in "Lady in the Dark," one of NBC's "spectaculars," scheduled for September 25. Following the late Gertrude Lawrence (stage) and Ginger Rogers (movies) in this role is a rugged chore but, says Ann, "It's a great part and it's different. I like doing different things."

The "Lady in the Dark" stint further solidifies Ann's claim to being a two-network girl. Private Secretary is a CBS venture which won so much acclaim that it was borrowed by rival NBC this summer as a hot-weather cooler for its audience.

In accord with her avowed preference for doing different things, Miss Sothern is now winding up a series of night club appearances which, oddly enough, have brought home to her the full impact of television.

"The early shows, at dinner hour, have surprised me. So many parents bring children and they all know me.

"That is, they know Susie, the private secretary, who comes into their homes on television. Many of the children are too young to remember me from the movies. But they all know Susie and, thank goodness, they seem to love her.

"I can't forget the time, during a performance, when a little girl walked out on the floor, threw her arms around me and said, 'I love you, Susie.' Nothing like that happened to me when I was in pictures as Maisie."

And speaking of "Maisie" again: Ann, understandably enough, just can't forget her. This summer, she revived the gum-chewing girl in a two-week stand in Reno and brought the house down. M-G-M may own those rights, but if this persistent blonde secretary really goes after them—would you like to bet on the outcome?

Tune up time: Miss Sothern rehearses starring role in TV's 'Lady In The Dark.'

Family Show With A Difference

MOST WIDELY TELECAST PROGRAM DEALS WITH THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

The most widely circulated TV show in the world is not I Love Lucy or Dragnet or Groucho Marx; and its stars are people whose names you have heard only vaguely, if at all. It is a half-hour dramatic show called This Is the Life, currently being aired on no less than 225 stations in the United States alone. It also is seen widely in Canada and Great Britain.

This Is the Life has neither sponsor nor commercial, in the accepted sense of the word. Yet it does have a sponsor, to the tune of $850,000 a year, and it does have a commercial. The product: the Christian way of life.

This Is the Life is produced by the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, a fact which is never mentioned on the show except in the credits at the end. It is filmed in Hollywood by a devoted, sport-shirted crew under the direction of a rather remarkable man named Herman W. Gockel.

Gockel is a Lutheran pastor who was forced by a chronic sore throat to give up the pulpit some years ago. Assigned by the church to create a good religious format for television, he is today preaching to 20,000,000 people through This Is the Life.

"It is not a religious show, actually," Gockel explains. "A religious show plays pretty much to a captive audience, people who watch it because it is of a religious nature. Our job is to reach the non-religious audience, people who wouldn't tune in if they thought they were going to get nothing but religion."

Gockel's solution, through This Is the Life, has been to tell a purely dramatic story for the first 10 or 15 minutes of the show. "The viewer will watch a dramatic plot unfold," Gockel says, disarmingly. "We hook him with that, then we throw him the pitch."

The pitch, which is the show's artfully hidden commercial, is generally delivered by a member of the Fisher family, the show's permanent cast. The Fishers are a typical Midwest family living in Middleburg, 100 miles from Chicago "in any direction you care to take." Father and Mother Fisher are played by Onslow Stevens and Nan Boardman.

Their three children are played by Randy Stuart, Michael Hall and David Kasday, with Randy recently adding to the family by marrying one David Wainwright, played by Bob Clarke. Patriarch of the family is Grampa Fisher, played by Forrest Taylor, and it is he who generally winds up delivering the pitch.

"We set up a problem, a conflict," Gockel explains, "which can only be resolved by the application of one Christian precept or another. The problem can involve the Fisher family directly or some neighbors or sometimes complete strangers. But the Fishers are invariably in there, and it is Grampa who generally saves the day. Emily (Randy Stuart), too, is pretty good with a pitch. And then there's Pastor Martin, played by Nelson Leigh, who appears in perhaps 30 per cent of the films."

Filmed by Family Films, headed by Sam Hersh, This Is the Life currently is at work on its third series of 26 shows. The films are given without charge to any station that wants them. "Every station," Gockel says, "has to give a certain amount of its time to shows of a public service nature. So we've just tried to be better than most public service film series, and apparently we've succeeded."

Station managers agree, for This Is the Life draws a phenomenal amount of mail, most of it asking for help and advice. The Lutheran Church Missouri Synod answers every letter, often referring the writer to a minister of his own church. "We're not primarily interested in selling Lutheranism," Gockel explains, "but Christian precepts. We do get converts, but we look upon them as a pleasant by-product of the show. A bonus, you might say."

Emily (Randy Stuart), right, offers sage advice in troubled situation.
